1. Three additional Chinese armies may have entered Korea:

On 1 December the Chinese Communist High Command in Korea made arrangements to move an additional army group into the peninsula.

This army group, composed of nine infantry divisions and one armored division, reportedly was part of the Second Field Army and was to move into Korea around 1 January.

Comment:

Three additional armies, which normally comprise an army group, would increase Chinese Communist strength in Korea by approximately 100,000 men.