Memorandum by the Director of Central Intelligence

1. Pursuant to the provisions of C.I.G. Directive No. 4, the Information Branch, C.P.S., made a survey to determine what coverage of the foreign language press in the United States is desirable for intelligence purposes and how that coverage should be obtained.

2. After consideration of the results of this survey and further study by the Central Intelligence Group, the enclosed report to the Intelligence Advisory Board has been prepared and is submitted for information.

3. It is believed that no action by the National Intelligence Authority is required in this matter.

SIRNEX W. SMITH
Director
Aside from limited use as a check on subversive activities, the foreign language press in the United States before the war was but little exploited as a source of intelligence information. During the war, however, considerable use was made of this source in following the activities of foreign groups and individuals in this country, and in addition it proved to be a useful source of intelligence information on countries blacked out by enemy control. In accordance with C.I.O. Directive No. 4 a survey was made to determine if coverage of the foreign language press is desirable for intelligence purposes, what personnel are available for the work and which agency or agencies should be responsible for such a project.

2. From the evidence collected the Director of Central Intelligence concludes:

a. That some organized effort to cover and analyze the foreign language press in the United States is desirable;

b. That since the Department of State alone manifested any considerable interest in such a project, it should be developed by that Department to the extent determined by its needs and means;

c. That competent personnel appear to be available;
That the Department of State should invite the F.M.I., MID, CMI, and A-2 to cooperate by the mutual exchange of information and advice likely to render the service of general usefulness to all intelligence agencies of the government.

Discussion upon which the foregoing conclusions are based is contained in Enclosure "A" (Appendix "A" hereto).

3. No action by S.I.A. appears to be necessary in this matter.
APPENDIX "B"

DISCUSSION

Note: The term "foreign language press" as used in this discussion refers to newspapers, magazines and pamphlets published in a foreign language in the United States. It is not to be confused with material printed in a foreign language but published abroad.

1. By memorandum of 20 February 1946 (1.), Mr. Alfred McCormack, then Special Assistant to the Secretary of State in charge of Research and Intelligence, suggested that the Director of Central Intelligence take under advisement the matter of determining what coverage of the foreign language press in the United States is desirable for intelligence purposes and how the coverage should be obtained. This matter falls logically under the provisions of paragraph 4.09, C.I.O. Directive No. 2. Accordingly, C.I.O. Directive No. 4 ordered a survey of the subject.

2. The matter was discussed with representatives of the State Department, AID, O.MI, A-2 and F.B.I.

3. Before the war the foreign language press was little exploited as a source of foreign intelligence information, although some use was made of it as a check on subversive activities of foreign groups in this country. The F.B.I. in the discharge of its mission related to internal security, collected information on foreign language newspapers as to editorship, financial backing, influence, etc.

4. During the war the foreign language press became of considerable interest to several government agencies. The F.B.I. intensified its coverage of this source for information on foreign groups and individuals.
MID, ONI AND A-2 searched magazines and newspapers published in foreign languages for any information of value. This coverage was undertaken to avoid overlooking any source which might yield any information of intelligence value concerning countries blacked out due to enemy control. The State Department during this period made little use of information gleaned from foreign language newspapers and magazines.

5. The only agency to engage in a comprehensive coverage of the foreign language press was the Foreign Nationalities Branch, OSS. This coverage was performed in connection with research into origins, political and economic developments and psychological reactions of foreign groups in the United States as the basis for reports on the composition and activities of such groups.

6. Organized coverage of the foreign language press in the United States, for government agencies, ceased with deactivation of the Foreign Nationalities Branch, OSS, in the fall of 1945. Certain officers of the Department of State read some of the foreign language publications produced in the United States, but such reading is not part of an organized official plan. The F.B.I. covers the foreign language press in the United States to the extent required by its obligation to search out subversive tendencies among foreign language groups in the United States.
7. The F.B.I. is satisfied with its present coverage as a check on subversive activities, and MID, ONI, and A-2 are of the opinion that the value of this source of intelligence information does not warrant their contributing personnel, funds or facilities to achieve comprehensive coverage.

8. Information of the type obtainable from the foreign language press in the United States is required primarily by the State Department as follows:

a. by research personnel as background material for intelligence studies;

b. by geographic divisions for analysis of influence of foreign pressures on foreign language groups in the United States;

c. by the Office of International Information and Cultural Affairs as a means of measuring the effectiveness of its foreign language propaganda.

The Department of State would welcome the re-establishment of a comprehensive coverage of the foreign language press in the United States, but does not possess the funds required to support such coverage.

9. A small portion (apparently eight or ten persons) of the now scattered Foreign Nationalities branch of GSS, is still in Washington and could, no doubt, be engaged by the department if the need and funds to support it exist.
CONFIDENTIAL

C.I.G.

28 May 1946

CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE GROUP

PROVISION FOR COVERAGE OF THE FOREIGN LANGUAGE PRESS
IN THE UNITED STATES
References: C.I.G. Directive No. 4

Memorandum by the Director of Central Intelligence

1. Pursuant to the provisions of C.I.G. Directive No. 4, the Information Branch, C.P.S., made a survey to determine what coverage of the foreign language press in the United States is desirable for intelligence purposes and how that coverage should be obtained.

2. After consideration of the results of this survey and further study by the Central Intelligence Group, the enclosed report to the Intelligence Advisory Board has been prepared and is submitted for information.

3. It is believed that no action by the National Intelligence Authority is required in this matter.

JIMMY W. QUINN

Director

CONFIDENTIAL

C.I.G. -1-
1. Aside from limited use as a check on subversive activities, the foreign language press in the United States before the war was but little exploited as a source of intelligence information. During the war, however, considerable use was made of this source in following the activities of foreign groups and individuals in this country, and in addition it proved to be a useful source of intelligence information on countries blacked out by enemy control. In accordance with C.I.O. Directive No. 1, a survey was made to determine if coverage of the foreign language press is desirable for intelligence purposes, what personnel are available for the work and which agency or agencies should be responsible for such a project.

2. From the evidence collected the Director of Central Intelligence concludes:

a. That some organized effort to cover and analyze the foreign language press in the United States is desirable;

b. That since the Department of State alone manifested any considerable interest in such a project, it should be developed by that Department to the extent determined by its needs and means;

c. That competent personnel appear to be available;
d. That the Department of State should invite the F.B.I., MID, OMI, and A-2 to cooperate by the mutual exchange of information and advice likely to render the service of general usefulness to all intelligence agencies of the government.

Discussion upon which the foregoing conclusions are based is contained in Enclosure "A" (Appendix "A" hereto).

3. No action by N.I.A. appears to be necessary in this matter.
APPENDIX 'F'

DISCUSSION

Note: The term "foreign language press" as used in this discussion refers to newspapers, magazines and pamphlets published in a foreign language in the United States. It is not to be confused with material printed in a foreign language but published abroad.

1. By memorandum of 20 February 1946 (1.), Mr. Alfred McCormack, then Special Assistant to the Secretary of State in charge of Research and Intelligence, suggested that the Director of Central Intelligence take under advisement the matter of determining what coverage of the foreign language press in the United States is desirable for intelligence information purposes and how the coverage should be obtained.

2. The matter was discussed with representatives of the State Department, C.N.I., C.E.I. and F.R.L.

3. Before the war the foreign language press was little exploited as a source of foreign intelligence information, although some use was made of it as a check on subversive activities of foreign groups in this country. The F.S.I. in the discharge of its mission related to internal security, collected information on foreign language newspapers as to editorship, financial backing, influence, etc.

4. During the war the foreign language press became of considerable interest to several government agencies. The F.S.I. intensified its coverage of this source for information on foreign groups and individuals.

---

(1.) On file in C.I.A.
KID, OSI AND A-2 searched magazines and newspapers published in foreign languages for any information of value. This coverage was undertaken to avoid overlooking any source which might yield any information of intelligence value concerning countries blacked out due to enemy control. The State Department during this period made little use of information gleaned from foreign language newspapers and magazines.

5. The only agency to engage in a comprehensive coverage of the foreign language press was the Foreign Nationalities Branch, GOS. This coverage was performed in connection with research into origins, political and economic developments and psychological reactions of foreign groups in the United States as the basis for reports on the composition and activities of such groups.

6. Organized coverage of the foreign language press in the United States, for government agencies, ceased with desactivation of the Foreign Nationalities Branch, GOS, in the fall of 1945. Certain officers of the Department of State read some of the foreign language publications produced in the United States, but such reading is not part of an organized official plan. The F.I. covers the foreign language press in the United States to the extent required by its obligation to search out subversive tendencies among foreign language groups in the United States.
7. The FBI is satisfied with its present coverage as a check on subversive activities, and NID, OS, and D-2 are of the opinion that the value of this source of intelligence information does not warrant their contributing personal, funds or facilities to achieve comprehensive coverage.

8. Information of the type obtainable from the foreign language press in the United States is required primarily by the State Department as follows:

 a. By research personnel as background material for intelligence studies;

 b. By geographic divisions for analysis of influence of foreign pressures on foreign language groups in the United States;

 c. By the Office of International Information and Cultural Affairs as a means of measuring the effectiveness of its foreign language propaganda.

The Department of State would welcome the re-establishment of a comprehensive coverage of the foreign language press in the United States, but does not possess the funds required to support such coverage.

9. A small portion (apparently eight or ten persons) of the now scattered Foreign Nationalities Branch of OSS, is still in Washington and could, as doubt, be engaged by the department if the need and funds to support it exist.
APPENDIX "A"

DISCUSSION

Note: The term "foreign language press" as used in this discussion refers to newspapers, magazines and pamphlets published in a foreign language in the United States. It is not to be confused with material printed in a foreign language but published abroad.

1. By a memorandum of 20 February 1946 (1.), Mr. Alfred McCormack, then Special Assistant to the Secretary of State in charge of Research and Intelligence, suggested that the Director of Central Intelligence take under advisement the matter of determining what coverage of the foreign language press in the United States is desirable for intelligence information purposes and how the coverage should be obtained. This matter falls logically under the provisions of paragraph 4, H.I.A. Directive No. 1. Accordingly, C.I.O. Directive No. 4 directed a survey of the subject.

2. The matter was discussed with the State Department, BID, ONI, A-2 and F.B.I.

3. Before the war the foreign language press was little exploited as a source of foreign intelligence information, although some use was made of it as a check on subversive activities of foreign groups in this country. The F.B.I., in the discharge of its mission concerned with internal security, collected information on foreign language newspapers as to editorship, financial backing, influence, etc.

4. During the war the foreign language press became of considerable interest to several government agencies. The F.B.I. intensified its coverage of this source for information on foreign groups and individuals.

(1.) On file in C.I.O.
KID, ONI and A-2 searched magazines and newspapers published in foreign languages for any information of value. This coverage was undertaken to avoid overlooking any source which might yield any information of intelligence value from countries blanked out by enemy control. The State Department at that time made little use of information gleaned from foreign language newspapers and magazines.

5. The only agency to engage in a comprehensive coverage of the foreign language press was the Foreign Nationalities Branch, OSS. This coverage was performed in connection with research into foreign group origins in the United States, their political and economic development and their psychological reactions as the basis for reports on the composition and activities of such groups.

6. Organised coverage of the foreign language press for government agencies ceased with deactivation of the Foreign Nationalities Branch, OSS in the Fall of 1945.

7. The F.N.B. is satisfied with its present coverage as a check on subversive activities, and KID, ONI, and A-2 are of the opinion that exploitation of this source for military intelligence information would not warrant their contributing personnel, funds or facilities to achieve comprehensive coverage.

8. Information of the type obtainable from the foreign language press in the United States is required primarily by the State Department for the research divisions for intelligence projects, for the geographic divisions to analyze the effect of foreign group pressures in the United States, and for the Office of International Information and Cultural Affairs to measure the effectiveness of this country's propaganda abroad. To provide for the State Department's current requirements, a service is needed similar to that formerly performed by the Foreign Nationalities Branch, OSS.

9. Although many of the personnel who were concerned with coverage of the foreign language press during the war have left the city, it is believed that there are still available a small number of persons with requisite ability and experience to staff a unit for the purpose.
APPENDIX "A"

DISCUSSION

Note: The term "foreign language press" as used in this discussion refers to newspapers, magazines and pamphlets published in a foreign language in the United States. It is not to be confused with material printed in a foreign language but published abroad.

1. By a memorandum of 20 February 1946 (1.), Mr. Alfred McConnell, then Special Assistant to the Secretary of State in charge of Research and Intelligence, suggested that the Director of Central Intelligence take under advisement the matter of determining what coverage of the foreign language press in the United States is desirable for intelligence information purposes and how the coverage should be obtained. This matter falls logically under the provisions of paragraph 4.b., N.I.A. Directive No. 2. Accordingly, C.I.O. Directive No. 1 directed a survey of the subject.

2. The matter was discussed with the State Department, N.I.A., C.I.O., A-2 and F.B.I.

3. Before the war the foreign language press was little exploited as a source of foreign intelligence information, although some use was made of it as a check on subversive activities of foreign groups in this country. The F.B.I., in the discharge of its mission concerned with internal security, collected information on foreign language newspapers as to editorship, financial backing, influence, etc.

4. During the war the foreign language press became of considerable interest to several government agencies. The F.B.I. intensified its coverage of this source for information on foreign groups and individuals.

(1.) On file in C.I.O.
210. OMI and A-2 searched magazines and newspapers published in foreign languages for any information of value. This coverage was undertaken to avoid overlooking any source which might yield any information of intelligence value from countries blacked out by enemy control. The State Department at that time made little use of information gleaned from foreign language newspapers and magazines.

5. The only agency to engage in a comprehensive coverage of the foreign language press was the Foreign Nationalities Branch, OSS. This coverage was performed in connection with research into foreign group origins in the United States, their political and economic development and their psychological reactions as the basis for reports on the composition and activities of such groups.

6. Organized coverage of the foreign language press for government agencies ceased with deactivation of the Foreign Nationalities Branch, OSS in the Fall of 1945.

7. The F.B.I. is satisfied with its present coverage as a check on subversive activities, and MID, OMI, and A-2 are of the opinion that exploitation of this source for military intelligence information would not warrant their contributing personnel, funds or facilities to achieve comprehensive coverage.

8. Information of the type obtainable from the foreign language press in the United States is required primarily by the State Department for the research divisions for intelligence projects, for the geographic divisions to analyze the effect of foreign group pressures in the United States, and for the Office of International Information and Cultural Affairs to measure the effectiveness of this country's propaganda abroad. To provide for the State Department's current requirements, a service is needed similar to that formerly performed by the Foreign Nationalities Branch, OSS.

9. Although many of the personnel who were concerned with coverage of the foreign language press during the war have left the city, it is believed that there are still available a small number of persons with requisite ability and experience to staff a unit for the purpose.